

POPULATION STUDIES

ISSN 0032-4728, e-ISSN 1477-4747

Vol. 79, n. 3, 2025

Consulta en línea desde Intranet

Research Articles
Katherine Keenan, Júlia Mikolai, Rebecca King and Hill Kulu	Intergenerational transmission of fertility in Great Britain: A parity-specific investigation using the 1970 British Cohort Study	445
Katarina L. Matthes, Mathilde Le Vu and Kaspar Staub	Fertility dynamics through historical pandemics and COVID-19 in Switzerland, 1871–2022	463
Shubhankar Sharma, Jo Mhairi Hale and Alessandro Feraldi	Disparities by sex, race/ethnicity, and education in trends in the disability burden in the United States, 1996–2018	479
Joana Maria Pujadas-Mora and Gabriel Brea-Martinez	Towards more horizontality in families? Sibling associations in socio-economic status in the Barcelona area in the sixteenth to nineteenth centuries	503
Esha Chatterjee and Johny K D	Unwanted fertility and impacts on self-rated health of women in India	525
Ian Shuttleworth, Stefan Leknes and Michael J. Thomas	Reassessing general explanations for long-run change in internal migration: Insights from Norway	551
James Raymer, Qing Guan, Yao Jiang and James O'Donnell	The contributions of immigration to demographic change across cities and regions in Australia	575
Leigh Senderowicz and Rishita Nandagiri	Thirty years of 'strange bedmates': The ICPD and the nexus of population control, feminism, and family planning	595
Beatrice Caniglia, Anna Zamberlan and Paolo Barbieri	The gendered role of occupational characteristics in lifelong singlehood across Italian birth cohorts	617
Research Notes
Zuzana Zilincikova, Gordey Yastrebov and Thomas Leopold	How many children do couples have when they break up? Educational stratification in parity at separation	637
Emily Smith-Greenaway	A new test of an old hypothesis: The link between women's perceptions of mortality conditions and their perceptions of modern healthcare amid demographic transition	649